OFFICIAL STATEMENT

October 8, 2025
Prepared by legal counsel for Vlad Tirla and Oana Batran

Purpose: This statement aims to clarify Vlad and Oana's former contractual roles and responsibilities in relation to Chainge, address certain misconceptions regarding their involvement in the project and set out their present position together with the legal measures undertaken in pursuit of due process and transparency.

1. Introduction: We want to begin by acknowledging the frustration, confusion, and anger that the Chainge community is experiencing – feelings we have been struggling with since the beginning of this year. We watched in dismay as the project in which we invested precious time, efforts and reputation became subject to financial difficulties. Over time, we noticed that frustration was often directed toward us (Oana and Vlad) personally. These times of uncertainty confirmed the importance of transparency, which is why we appreciate you taking the time to understand our point of view.

We hereby issue this statement in our personal names, following several weeks since the initiation of legal proceedings against Chainge. Our legal team has been duly notified of the current state of facts and the ongoing matters at Chainge.

2. Addressing Roles & Access Misconceptions: It is critical to begin with clearing up misconceptions about our involvement with Chainge, with DJ, and most importantly, with this community.
3. Our role was limited to performing the business development, communication and branding tasks (Oana) and UI, UX and product design tasks (Vlad) outlined in our contract – essentially, providing marketing and design deliverables and, occasionally, engaging with potential collaborators of Chainge. We executed those duties in good faith and fulfilled our contractual obligations.
4. *We are not executives or board members of Chainge, nor have we ever been. Our collaboration began around 2021, as independent contractors brought on for our specific expertise and professional skills. The scope of work was defined by the contract, and we had no decision-making authority over Chainge's strategy, operations or finances. While Chainge presented us as CBO and CPO for business operational purposes, we have never been corporate officers, directors, or had any legal executive authority within the Chainge entity.

For the avoidance of doubt, we lay below the key facts about our roles:

- We have never been agents of the company. We acted as contractors for our specific tasks. Nonetheless, we have been severely affected by the ongoing situation, even though we have never warranted, nor represented Chainge beyond our contractual tasks.

- We had no access to backend systems or technical infrastructure. We have never controlled, managed or accessed funds on the Chainge platform. Neither did we have any access to technical features of the platform or had any involvement in making payments, withdrawing funds, or making business judgements for Chainge. Responsibility for access to the backend and all other technical matters has at all times rested exclusively with DJ and the backend development team. Such responsibilities have never fallen within our scope of duties, which have been strictly limited to design and marketing functions.
- We never had control, access, or interaction with any Chainge vaults, wallets, or private keys.
- We never received any XCHNG tokens despite team allocation in the tokenomics of the token.

5. Information Flow: We are not withholding any information regarding the progress of the asset recovery process. DJ has never presented us more relevant information than what was available to the community regarding stuck transactions, blacklisted vaults, domain and software development problems, DJ's attempts to use his personal funds to allow users to retrieve their money, or the cryptocurrency investment funds that partner with DJ.
6. We never promised or personally endorsed any deadline that DJ proposed, simply because we did not have such information. In fact, if we ever confirmed these deadlines, it is because we, just as you, relied on those assurances for our own contractual remuneration.
7. Nonetheless, we remain committed to providing the limited information that we are aware of and supporting the shedding of light on the current financial distress, for the benefit of everyone, including ourselves.
8. In the past few months, as community frustrations have boiled over, we have personally endured an onslaught of harassment and threats. We fully understand anger – we are angry too – but we hope everyone realizes that directing hate and threats at us is harmful and unjustified.
9. Contract Breach: Our work has not been remunerated and our genuine pro-bono contributions in the community or with keeping partners informed have been alleged as unprincipled. This situation has taken a toll on our personal and professional lives. We initially believed, based on DJ's assurances to everyone, that the situation would be resolved within weeks. As months passed without resolution and harassment intensified, stepping back became necessary for our wellbeing and to obtain proper legal counsel. Given the complex legal and financial situation surrounding Chainge, we sought independent advice to help us manage our position as unpaid contractors and to navigate the overall situation responsibly. To be clear: this was a diligence measure, not an attempt to oppose or hide from the community. That said, we remain committed to cooperating fully with any inquiries from regulators or law enforcement.

10. Legal Representation: Before issuing this statement, we formally contacted DJ through our legal representatives to request: (1) payment of our outstanding invoices as contractors, and (2) answers to the community's and also our most pressing questions including the status of funds, why fsncan.com explorer has been offline for over 2 months, and updates and proof on the blacklisted vaults. As of this statement, we have not received substantive responses to these inquiries. We share the community's frustration with the lack of transparency and will continue pushing for answers through appropriate channels.
11. We regret the loss of trust and that our names have become tied to this situation. While we are not responsible for any circumstance that led here, we are committed to transparency and to supporting the community in seeking truth and resolution. Taking this legal step is part of that commitment.
12. In that spirit, and together with our legal team, we have collected questions from the community and will prepare answers over the coming week. Once ready, we will release a legal document compiling these responses or share them directly in the Telegram group. We will address matters that fall within our scope and responsibilities as outlined above. Please note that we are unable to provide in-depth technical explanations or a full breakdown of the Fusion/Chainge backend, as those aspects were never part of our direct remit.
13. In the next legal document to be released, we will share our experience working on Chainge and the timeline of aspects we can speak to. This represents our good faith effort to provide transparency. Following this document, further communication on these matters will proceed through legal channels, which ensures clarity and fairness for all involved.

Personal Note: We are here with you. Not apart from you. This project has been our work, our dedication and our motivation, but it has also been your belief, your time and your hope. That’s why fighting for answers matters. Let’s remember that at the end of the day, we are all seeking the same thing – the truth and a resolution to this terrible situation.

Sincerely,
Vlad & Oana
